Dear Friend of the Bradford Community and Folk Music:

As an individual or business who is actively involved in supporting your community, we are hopeful that you will become a supporter of HOTAfest, Bradford's own Heart of the Alleghenies Folk Music Festival. <http://hotafest.org>

As you may know, HOTA began in 2003 as a three day festival featuring Folk, Old Time, Celtic and Bluegrass music workshops, jams, dances and concerts. This unique, regional festival is a wonderful opportunity to bring a greater awareness and appreciation of traditional music to the public while helping the local community.

Next year's festival, scheduled for August 7th, 8th and 9th, 2009, will be held once again on the Bradford Campus of the University of Pittsburgh where dormitory lodging or camping facilities will both once again be available.

The Heart of the Alleghenies Folk Music Festival continues to grow larger and get better with each passing year, attracting visitors and participants from a wide geographical area. Talented musicians come together yearly on the Pitt Campus to create a professional staff for hosting the various workshops; many local musicians participate in the open jam and stage events, and nationally known folk musicians perform each year at the Saturday night concert.

Your sponsorship of this festival will help to offset the cost of classrooms for workshops, the stage for the concert, or for the general use of the Pitt campus for this event. In return, you or your business will receive advertisement space on our website and program, plus your name or business logo will also be displayed and featured prominently at our event. We will also be happy to thank you publicly for your support prior to the Saturday night concert.

Any contribution will be greatly appreciated.
